

Increasing Your Chances Of Success Beyond College

What do you want to do when you graduate? Maybe you have known all along what career path you want to take, or perhaps you are just figuring that out now. The choices you have made up to this point and through your college career will help you on your path to your first job out of college and eventually a career. If you graduate with a degree in meteorology but have little else to show for your college career, you will likely have a tough time finding a job in this field. In this talk you will learn that setting yourself apart, building relationships, taking risks, and being willing to change will greatly aid in your ability to find a job after college.
